ABSTRACT

A microelectromechanical system (MEMS) device is created by forming mechanical structures supported by a substrate having a bond ring area laterally spaced from the mechanical structures and having a sacrificial layer surrounding the mechanical structures. A bond ring material is formed on top of the sacrificial layer and the bond ring area. Some of the bond ring material is then removed to create a bond ring.